Liquidware Labs Logos Terms of Use

The official logotype uses the Liquidware name only (does not include the “Labs” or “Inc.”) and it is rendered in stylized format. The Liquidware “drop” accents the lettering off of the descender of the letter “q”. That is the only appropriate place for the drop and should not be placed anywhere else (above, below or to the right), nor should it be rendered in any other color than the official color assigned to the logo. Also, as the name Liquidware is trademarked, the ™ symbol must appear in the logo. However, it is not a registered trademark, so do not use the ®, nor should the ™ be enclosed in a circle.

Below is the official Liquidware logo.

Please note the appropriate proportions of the drops to the type font size. These are the proportions that should be kept when rendering the logo on all materials, including when screened onto fabric. For embroidery, please request the embroidery file from the Liquidware Marketing Department.

Liquidware Logo: Acceptable Background Treatments

The color Liquidware Labs, for the most part, will be rendered only on a white or black background to ensure that the colors used appear "true." Exceptions may be made in very rare cases, but must be run by the Liquidware Marketing Department for approval in advance. A sample of the Liquidware Labs logo on a black background is shown below.

On occasion, the Liquidware logo will need to be rendered without color. The only acceptable versions are solid black or solid white (reversed out) as shown below. All other variations must be approved by the Liquidware Marketing Department.

When the logo is reversed out – it should only be white. It cannot be against a color background, but the logo itself should not be rendered in a solid color (for example all green against a blue background.) No exceptions.

Again, the drops are to the left of the logo. The proportions are the same as with the color logo. Any questions about how to use or display the logo – particularly with regard to its use by outside agencies, including partners – should be referred back to the Liquidware Marketing Dept.

Liquidware Logotype: Unauthorized Treatments

The drops have appeared occasionally as a stand-alone element in Liquidware | promotional materials. Only the Liquidware Marketing Department can make a decision as to when and how to use the drops as a stand-alone graphical element. Partners are not allowed to use the drops alone in any situation. They may only use official Liquidware logos, provided by the Liquidware Marketing Department. If there are any questions, consult the Liquidware Marketing Department.

Below are some examples of incorrect ways to render the logo. The technical term for incorrectly displaying the logo – referred to as “corrupting” it. Although it may seem harmless to add or subtract elements, when you do so, it reduces the legal standing and ownership of Liquidware logo and allows others, including competitors, to infringe on its use.

Basically, any approach to render the logo in any other ways than the official logos (color, black & white) should be questioned. If you need guidance, please contact the Liquidware Marketing Department.
